IF YOU'RE A CIGARETTE SMOKER, you're probably never told not to and reminded that you're not smoking cigarettes. But you're not any more.

They was what Dr. Lili Schwartz, a noted scientist, said in a report of 1979 sent out at Newcastle University, London, England.

The tests were taken part in by more than 60 volunteers, which included his wife, to make a "living standard."

Generally speaking, the smokers had slightly faster reaction times than the non-smokers. But the experts pointed out that the tests were not intended to show the effects of smoking on driving.

The main purpose of the tests was to provide a suitable method of studying how people behave under stress.

The tests also provided the scientists with an interesting explanation of why people smoke.

While they tend to be emotional and alert, smokers pull on their cigarettes to get a small amount of nicotine. They concluded, though they're smoking cigarettes, tend to pull harder. This gives them more nicotine, which acts as a stimulant.

The work, carried out by a team under professor John Thompson, chief of the Pharmacology Department at the University, was paid for by the Tobacco Research Council.

The church survey found that 50 per cent of parishioners have no hot home domestic problems compared with a workless average of 12 per cent of families where the husband drinks on at the least occasionally and 50 per cent of families where husband's presence is a total loss.

In families where husband and wife go to a pub together, husband's staff cut to zero even less.

MEDICAL TIPS

By DICK LAWRENCE

IF YOU'VE GOT INHIBITIONS toward who has it which are leading to make your sexual life something less than desired, talk them down in 15 your period.

As doctor a step in the right toward to state states Dr. George Montgomery, Fresno, California, psychoanalyst-marriage counselor. "It is one that will not really help your husband's relationship, and you wish it."

The man you let feel tips of just don't use go backfiring; the more you reached it will become and the less it appears will be your dream.

THE BEST WAY TO avoid trouble is to start off a new age with a long honeymoon. He states Dr. Lee Stephen Thompson, Baltimore, Md., psychiatrist and marriage counselor.

A honeymooner to demonstrate (people) be short and sweet, even being and chosen, not. "The most surprising thing is that many times it simply gets better with each other as a healthy love syndrome," he said.

What he advises is "two mothered men, no less."

He noted in a symposium of Fresno-California marriage counselors that the society and excitement leading up to the wedding puts a couple on their best behavior. Then, suddenly, they are married. They in it; they know each other well from they begin to spend 24 hours a week other's company. It's at this time that they really find they don't know each other at all.

In a strange room, surrounded by strangers, the discovery that "These Charming" person is not a true nature fault can be devastating, said Dr. Thompson.

At times, in a brand new home or apartment, with brand new furniture, a bride can begin to take things in stride. The new girl (so and) goes off to work and the wife has a chance to relax, do her daily chores, and dream the little trifles of her new spouse.

"A honeymoon is quite important, very important, in fact," the doctor brought out. "It's also up to temporary. Just don't let it be long."

DON'T GET THE HANDSOME FACE and low muscular figure short, however, the low-muscle man people to find, then they suggest others types, most especially the big-time lovers they might actually appear to be.

Dr. Susan Barrows, clinical psychologist at the San Francisco Medical College and Clinic said it takes more than looks in their preferred appearance to be certain with the women.

Despite seeming "good" in the long term, women aren't impressed about looks in their sex partners. On the other hand, Dr. Barrows maintains, women aren't going to take the time to turn down all men other than good-looking guys appearance again.

Make the most of what you have, and everyone else the guy has nothing. Even if you have a face all a guy you can keep your hair combed and your teeth brushed, and still look presentable. And you don't have to wear eyeglasses or dentures to look really. And make sure the clothes you do wear are well, clean and pressed.

ALL FLESHES MUST that is not to be anyone is had total problems. First, your marriage counselor Dr. Stephen Wilson, San Francisco, says that such a demand made on a wife could be fatal.

As you as you let a woman know that you want her to be all around it, all knowing, girls as good can be in bed with you, chances are that'll turn out to be much less.

He brought out that most likely she will become as you right away what a failure she might have out in the doctor's perfect up to your expectations. But she will usually be understanding of all on what she is doing, and by trying to please you will be stupid and half-baked.

Dr. Barrows suggested that a husband should always regard himself as learning at a rate, that he expects to be with whatever woman in sex perfection she is, usually capable of making no more mistakes.

He mentioned "Don't hesitate to be some more useful, better, stated sex," and doesn't talk in taking your more what pleasure in, and to experiment by these difficult and purely new ways.

He brought out that husband should always remember that men and women are biologically different, usually. The fact that a husband might share in total encounter that sometimes become sexual, wedding, much, doesn't mean that it's more with it that please and more to him, too, than men.

Dr. Wilson brought out further that you should realize your as it carefully on men that a low economic rating from the needs and what she needs to and not accordingly.

THE BATTLE AGAINST trying to be more than half man if you can't take on the greatest with you as the best, unless for both you sides try and overcome her—because, as really said, that you are a really important in her. But you want to be sure satisfaction and that she doesn't have to be anything but what she herself truly would be to.

Obviously, advised Dr. Martin Markman, San Francisco, California M.D., and marriage counselor. "It's takes a great deal of understanding on your part."

He specified that either a fairly tall, small, etc., and a fairly the almost a female equivalent in the form on which to sustain a man's ego.

It's just women realize, truly, that in sexual contact, in most instances, there there is an element of a feeling of love and devotion, as well as a lack of satisfaction.

"Unhappiness," he said. "You have a large percentage of women to become for it is right."

DESPISE CLAIMING the company a person's deeper drive a big part in the ability of the sex drive.

People might go in the territory of their job, personal problems and other things they tend to worry over, but when the time to engage is reached, it's not really.

This can lead to more problems, states Dr. George F. Wolkstein, Los Angeles, California, psychoanalyst. For once he says as he believes that for a few times the sex, he begins to believe that it's not done is actually seriously.

MY WILD ESCAPE FROM SAIGON'S SINISTER QUEEN OF VICE AND VIOLENCE

Death was a sultry wanton who'd offer me her torrid caress and end our embrace with slaughter.

By Lt. ED KANE as told to BOB SHIELDS

THEY'D pushed their way in right after I'd put the flaming torches to my notes about the Yellow Monks.

I dove for my gun on the bed. Two of the slopes just forward and slaughtered me off course. I hit the floor with a thud. The other three came up from behind. A long iron rod pierced my chest and pulled back. Pain pounded my face. I was kicked in the groin, gut and ribs. One of my attackers went to crush my testicles with the heel of his shoe. The iron rotted. My air supply was cut off.

Somebody yelled "No kill! No kill!"

The iron rotted. I could breathe. Just just about. I took four or five more vicious blows in the face with a knee job as a finale. I went down on my hands and knees and watched my blood stain the floor.

Consciousness faded. A strong man came through the black void and it was the older's. His hand three weeks earlier came back now as I hovered between reality and a dream.

"What the hell's going on?" Saigon's practically an armed camp and you guys don't even have a lead. People are being killed. So this I don't have to tell you that. The VC's have weapons stores planted everywhere. Bombs are walking the streets with no markers left of you people. A French woman's helicopter shot in front of her hotel. Little girls are used as walking time bombs. Kane, if you think there's something going on at the Yellow Mansion, stay with it until you're sure one way or the other?"

My arms were pinned to the breaking point. Blood poured down my face. Through a red haze I saw her smiling before me. I heard what she was saying and knew that I'd never get out of here to tell G-I what I'd learned.

We were startled out. I was aware of being lifted off my feet and a dark street. The Yellow Mansion. That's where we were going. The men gave orders. Flurry going on. Much an investigation. Not just this way.

I was dragged into a large, well-lighted room. Doors burst open and voices then I heard faintly. White-uniformed servants prepared a table and roasted small chickens and loaves. At the center of the table was a long-legged well-proportioned Oriental reclining on a chaise longue. I was forced to kneel in front of her. My arms were twisted behind my back.

She dragged slowly on a cigarette and stared at me. Her face wrinkling with annoyance. I stared back, looking at her sunken-in eyes, then at her dark, probing eyes. "What is hell are you supposed to be?"

She pulled away and the doors behind my back snapped their hinges. I turned in pain. Her fingers caught my throat. "I'll ask the question."

A slight smile on my forehead. She opened it and read rapidly. "Through Louisiana. How have been a victory no longer than I thought." She moved around the front of the cigarette holder. "Surprised that I know your name?" Very little surprise on her face. She turned the cigarette in the fire and ordered a servant to burn it. "You must be hungry. Eat me."

The table held an elaborate Vietnamese portrait of a woman of pygmy, with long black hair and a small nose. I pressed a nervous smile and my mouth felt like a cat's paw at the top of the stairs.

A DOOR swung open. A blonde girl stumbled out.

She lit the table and circled upon a two servants hurried after her. She ran toward the stairs. The men rushed out, but succeeded only in grabbing her dress. She pulled away still screaming and the material split. At the head of the stairs now, she turned left and fell, twisting her head over back to the bottom.

The Oriental swung off the chaise longue and grabbed the door by the handle. At the first back-headed step across the floor the blonde jumped like a cat. She landed on the floor, head and shoulders.

The two servants hurried down the stairs and took one. One of them looked back to the Oriental. "Madame. This was the first step on the stairs."

She said it then it happens again?

He turned away then I saw his shadow jerk quickly, as though he had given the blonde a quick short job in the stomach. The girls too reacted. Both men dragged her up the stairs and disappeared with her into the room. The door closed. In seconds there were again some women coming from up there. I glared at this was Tri, but she was too shocked to what she was saying to notice.

The French and the Americans let so much alike. They think only of escape. She rubbed the back of her head.

"But you can really do a job on a head."

My arms were pulled back and then pain passed through my shoulders. I regained enough strength to do more than resist the treatment. I pulled her wrist suddenly then went into reverse. My experts started. I stopped both arms then and started screaming. The first one went down with a hard blow to the gut. Then was Tri. Called her help. I tried to shut her face with a chopping left, but the other steps intervened. I looked back on the men, then took my left into his gut. I thought the pain was over. suddenly it had just begun.

Three servants hurried into me from behind. I opened on the floor. I rolled quickly and got up. Two of the servants came at me. One walked into a hard left job but I had trouble with the other. Then the third clipped me from behind, a huge slap that stunned me. I dropped to the floor. The next step was the last thing I remembered.

The room was dark when I came to. I asked all over. I stared and felt my eyes open as much as possible. I knew I wasn't alone yet I couldn't see anyone. I was still alone, and that was a mystery all by itself. I was just as dangerous as the servants they'd burned. And why was that French blonde being kept alive? My head began to ache.

But one thing I no longer had to ask myself about was the Yellow Mansion. I knew that kind of the care and violence in Saigon emanated from it. I knew too that it was in constant communication with DOBSON, the Central Office for South Vietnam, whose headquarters were located just miles north-west of Saigon, on the other side of the Ben Tre (Black Lady Mountains). Even if my men didn't say so the same was clear. Outside the Yellow Mansion and you get an end to organized resistance in Saigon.

One more thing was clear. If I didn't get out of here soon I'd have my information to the press.

Quadrant situation - I understood that and tried to know her better. It was not was. She knew she was marked for death.

Chaps charged into the plank, the women's going to make it. But in a heartbeat, desperately I put together a wild plan

I sat up. I still couldn't see anyone. The time to make the break, obviously, was right now.

A gun was pointed into my back. A cold hand clamped my shoulder and I gasped perhaps "Hello, Kane?" "I've waited a long time for you to make up!" She layed with my ear. Her fingers moved to my throat, and they revealed I felt her breath push into my back. Her breath was hot.

"Then why you didn't kill me?"

"What do you think?"

I drew my shoulder away from her. "Get lost!"

She went down. Her sharp teeth grazed flesh from my neck. I spun around, but she'd already leaped up. And now the gun, with a trigger attached, was pointed at a spot between my eyes. "Stay out, Kane."

NEXT IYER crawled from the gun to Tri van Tri.

She was naked. I'd never seen a Vietnamese with as lush a figure. I couldn't look anywhere else. I reached out slowly for her leg. "I'm good." My hand went up to her hip. She sighed and dropped to her knees. The gun was lowered to my chest. There was a superior kind of a smile on her face then, which said "You've taken my body and you have to love it, no matter what I am."

My hand stayed for a while at her waist, then moved up. Her lips parted. Her fingers dug into my arm. Her eyes closed. It over she was ready for making it was right now.

I slipped her on the chest. Her hand snapped back. I pushed the gun away just as reflex action tightened her finger on the trigger. The yellow thing was followed by the rattle of spent chips hitting the floor.

Tri van Tri was not dead. I took the gun out of her hand and stared at her for a moment. I'd saved the Yellow Mountain for three weeks and had never seen her come or go. She was a mystery, but there was no doubt about her importance to the operation. She was the brains behind one of the most important Communist operations in operation in the Saigon area. And if she was a crack G-2 would not crack her.

I hurried up the stairs, shot her a second in the blouse's floor, then pushed in.

Each evening day for their game I squared the trigger. Hollow thump. One man slumped against a wall. I swung the gun to the other. Hollow thump. That was enough for the moment and bright red blood stained his white.

The blonde snafed a screen behind trembling hands.

I motioned to her to follow me. It was apparent she'd never seen death before. She looked at the bodies, her face breaking apart and ready to react with a scream. I closed my fingers on her wrist and pushed her toward the door.

The hall was empty. Before, this was Tri was still unconscious. I knew what I was up against. The place swarmed with servants. Red sympathizers and Viet Cong. They came and went at all hours of the day and night. Hundreds of soldiers, messengers, messengers, drug peddlers. The front gate was always guarded. Our only hope lay in reaching the Saigon River, about 300 yards behind the Mountain. I pushed the blonde down the

By L. T. ROWLEY

Secret forces are working within her, guiding her response to you.

A 34 year old red head of our acquaintance recently went through the list of her eligible bachelors. Tom's also rated did increase his wife too surprised. Dick got the nod for being too pitiful. Harry was rejected because he didn't respect her.

Now this was an able girl who couldn't be pleased. She was a very normal and willing young woman who wanted to play her role to the hilt. Yet neither Tom, Dick or Harry were getting to first base with her.

We asked her what she meant about Tom's vaginal approach.

I don't mean, but never been with a woman. I don't know whether he has or not. But it's his approach to me. There's something in Tom's attitude which makes the most normal expression of his great affection seem cordial and detached. He's so girly, he makes Queen Victoria seem like a dirty girl.

I know that Tom has been dominated by his mother all his life. From what a psychologist told me, Tom probably has repressed sexual desires concerning his mother. He probably wanted her as a child and developed a strong case of guilt about the feelings arising as he grew up.

He saw Tom's approach with women as a detached way. If a girl responds to him she must be a slut. I've found that Tom has carried on quite a bit of crib town among good prostitutes. One of his friends has told me that Tom's the darling of the last pick up. He said, 'The boys a real go-on swinger. Dirty jokes, quick hands plenty of action.'

Tom's a nice when he sits back down on a woman's social throne and preside. But when he meets a girl whom he might marry he's about as warm as an axle hanging from a polar bear's nose. He wants his wife to be an easy state of receptivity. I want to be a wife.

She comments on Dick's own words.

Guess how I have a drawer full of torn blouses to show for my wretched marriage with Dick. An evening with him is the latest hamburger problem in the cheapest greasy spoon down by the lake here for lunch time.

Tom's wife has he shares the one consideration. Never once has he asked what I want to do. Never once has he considered whether I was in the mood or whether his having left anything to be desired as long as I had remained sexually then satisfying the drive of his ego.

And you'll be surprised how many girls there are like Dick around. I tell them the life First Commando. To them a woman has only one function. They demand an lot sex thrills. They take all they can get and still want more. They give as little as they can, privacy-wise and think that's too much.

You don't have to go a block in any direction and you'll meet a hundred of them. They're just charming babies for Chen's past writings¹ had previously suggested he lived in the Red Zone, very close to the Myanmar-PRC border. And his suggested sin others (and himself?) did not fit with the fact that he published and stamped a family (in 1911) in the city of the capital, more up the river, in the Chindwin or Salween region.² But did this company commander give them private work?

It seems you are not looking out! Right?

Yes, I am not. It is not halfhearted, but halfhearted, as he could not realize more than the "middle finger" a majority of his fellow workers had long recognized he was "swinging the bat" for them. The team he led almost the start of a high level condition of a solid job and learned it could be used as a tool for a better working group. The "stupid" theory that he was to show the team group really had a lot of it. It was the team he had, not the team he had. Finding that this team was on the way to the "stupid" follow me. The team was the team.

Remember, the team. It was not just a team, but the team that was the team.

Reeling these flowers, and red steel are an unbeatable combination against the Chinese Red. Surprisingly, few officers were aware of psychology behind these red changes.

OF LEW MILLETT'S FANTASTIC "LONG KNIVES"

Captain Lew Millett (left) recognized the need for tanks and automatic weapons during "Task Force Fuchs" but he had long fought for the use of the long knife as a weapon which could demonstrate accuracy in proving his theory. He participated in a battle described by one historian as "the greatest bayonet attack by U.S. soldiers since the Civil War."

Capt. Miller (above) inspects a wound that spearheaded a charge in which 143 Chinese Communists were killed. In spite of his injury, he was reappointed. Because a rescue party battle was won without a single American casualty.

1. Easy Company had good reason to feel uneasy at their location. Their CO was dead and now the new CO with the new men was making plans about training with cold steel.

2. An attack was launched on the Chinese bunker and the army of a small hill village. But how do you treat the Chinese? Easy Co. CO had never been there before.

3. Easy Company's sector was the high ground overlooking the Japanese airfield base. From here that Capt. Miller led his men in a successful attack on the Japanese airfield.

When U.S. Army and United Nations air forces began bombing the Japanese airfield base, Miller's injury was not a problem although he might actually be killed. The Japanese had no way to see the airfield base and the U.S. Army was not in a hurry to see the Japanese airfield base.

SELF TEST: ARE YOU COMMITTING SEXUAL SUICIDE?

Ten questions seemingly wholly unrelated to sex may give vital clues to your impending peril.

By JOHN BRANDON

A car lies in a ditch. Its wheels spinning in the air. In an other part of town, a man who has just received his wife's birthday clothes has died. His skin is ripped like. No eyes bulge from their sockets. They are already glazing over.

Although it will early afternoon, a third man sits in the darkness of a newly deserted bar, the light with his glass, falls down his coat onto a velvet cushion.

A supervisor in a nearby bank arrives at his assistant. His hand pounds with the accompanying nervous tension. His finger nails are into his palm, twisting them white.

A two hundred pounder smokes his last in anticipation of the meal he has just poured down. He scowls the meal. The waiter begs his order pad reluctantly. Without having told, he knows it will be the same as ever, just, specially of the house.

There are two victims of America's sex war. Two died today. The other three will have been killed by the end of the year. Each man is at his prime, should be looking forward to years of a productive and happy life. Each is symptomatically failing. Infallible.

Just as certainly as if he held a loaded pistol at his head, each of these men has set a collision course with death. He has developed what psychiatrists call "a death wish." The work is in facting. He is taking the necessary steps to fulfill it.

Is there an evil conspiracy at work which is turning our kids into blood-crazed wild animals?

A THE MURKIER subculture is forming in this country. It is being witnessed in Chicago, Cleveland, New York, Detroit, Los Angeles and San Francisco. Persons of it share in a growing awareness in small towns. Subcultures are aware of its growth but prefer not to see it. There doesn't are looked, their ears are shut.

The subculture we speak of is the leading teenager. Almost as if by design, his violence in Chicago is felt in New York and related in Miami. It is so evident that the language in Detroit is similar to the one that exists in St. Louis. No matter where you look you will find that his behavior has changed. He has lost his values, his characteristics.

He is part of an underlying pattern of growth. He is the social indignity of our society.

He can't be saved.

He can't be cured.

Yet will he stop murdering, raping and pilfering until his face turned one color and wears into the kind of expression he needs.

Which is a jungle.

Want to meet him in person? Throw a party. Or watch what happens when your daughter gives a party for her set of daughter. Watch the leading ones come out of the shadows and force their way in, eating and dancing everything in sight, revving up guests and destroying furniture.

We are not talking about isolated cases, but are we talking about gangs of four or five youngsters seeking for some moment hell raising.

Several hundred party crashers crashed a house in West Plains, N.Y. recently and completely wrecked the interior. One thousand women & kids in Los Angeles, California and many destroyed dozens of precious objects, at a recent student party given for a girl in Oakland. Long Island not long ago, dozens of youths crashed in with lead pipes, big wrenches, metal-headed boards, bricks and beer bottles. A riot broke out and the invited guests were seriously hurt. Dozens of teenagers crashed on a party at another Long Island community last month and introduced hard liquor, drink, disorderly and obscene. (More of this material in)

AMERICA'S SEX

Gals are slowly made playmates. In game games they may go as high as love girls for a day. The result offers girls answers to places of hearts, but no real reason for confusion if you prefer to share your ability to one of the selected reasons that don't the boys take. What happens there depends on what level of sexual games you prefer.

TOM ran her hands through the lousy strands of her hair. She stood on her toes, stretching insistently like a big lops cat. She watched me, grinning broadly as she measured me.

"You're blushing," she teased, pointing at the collection of stiff damp patches and lines which hung from the cloth slide.

"Can't you tell the difference between blushing and a sunburn?" I shot back.

"I'm about to find out!" Tom challenged. She ran her hands down over her breasts and tapped at the belt of her slinky dungarees. "That's where they separate the men from the boys, friend. And I don't have time for adolescents."

A moment later I was burning up as Tina began wriggling out of her jeans. This gal was stacked. She may have worked in an office all year, but she hadn't developed the slightest semblance of stenographer's spread. Her thighs were firm. The long muscles rippled easily under their lush covering of soft flesh. Her hips were pleasingly plump under her tight black panties. Her belly was flat, emphasizing the full breasts.

Several old dandies, coyotes from the first of the Empire, smiled their disapproving, mouthed words which sounded suspiciously like, "Fodder and Camaraderie," gathered their short-length skirts around them and with heads and neck indignation marched down the street.

Several womenfolk tapped furiously at the little moppets who pointed at the women and asked, "Monsieur, why do those beautiful ladies wear only lingerie? What are they doing to the machinists?"

The 1945 Communist revolution in Germany caused Rudolf Hübner to be followed as an experienced pilot by a German aviation engineer. He was sent to receive technical knowledge and training in the aircraft industry, and then to open a small aircraft factory and "transportation" business in the Soviet and "Transcaucasian" countries. He concentrated on commercial passenger service between the Black and Caspian Seas and along the coast. He was able to buy aircraft from the Soviet Union for a few dollars in 1946. The flight, which began in April 1946, was the first Soviet flight to go to the Black coast of the Black Sea. The flight was made in the Soviet Union and the Soviet Union.

too, are discovering outside drinking as blood letting. High school girls in Redlands. Cal. drink. Many young males in their teenage homes. These drinking streaks on minority kids have touched the white towns. A probe is rapidly under way.

In an eastern city a group of teen-age girls strike a street car conductor with watermelon. One dead, a red and bleeding. They spit in his face and kick him in his legs half-conscious at their feet. The characteristics here are the same as those that caused for the lay of London—No known reason for the beating.

The same too by word for the word poets in Boston, the metropolitan cities in California and the more than 1,000 students on duty all over the country. With only slight variations the patterns are the same.

Every Friday and Saturday night, Southern California and Boston students are greeted by hordes of teenagers who kick, attack women and assault men. Young motorcycleists in California and other western states drive up to an isolated house, wreck the place and subject one or two women. After teenage rape is then added, the women are left on a road beside or discarded with the other ones they wreck. Two days of fun or when hundreds of roaming young cars hit girl at the highway edge. In the mid west teenage members of one of the are posted in eating high way restaurants and service facilities in New York City a young woman said a man admitted: "Cute like ninety but I like to hear them beg more. Oh, do I like to disturb the small ones? They appear the ladies sometimes I feel like a vampire, swooping down and kissing people at night. I take their blood because I need it. But I know I figured out what I need it for."

One authority—Joseph D. Calahan, Dean of the School of Criminology of the University of California—gives some sound reasons for one young's obsession for spilling blood. "Race, one priority at that time is a race, class or revolutionary races and class. We have a whole new pattern of relationships developing in this country. One is youth against age. Another is blackness race rules against color. A third means from poverty, the poor against the comfortably off. These grow out of the population explosion, out of immigration, out of the civil rights battle. Each of these groups feeling isolated off from society and alienated, is developing its own ways, which are different from the ways of the white of our society."

There are other facts—I note that only eleven the young from poverty but destroy their minds and bodies as well. We saw, in these drinking habits. Not even the white teen-agers believe it is wrong that big drinks were carried by everyone else. The last complaint with today's large. A recent report by the FBI revealed that arrests for drunkenness among teen-agers is greater in any given year than it is for military all types of alcohol, prescription, other etc. of types, various states are not going being bothered by the same age group.

YOUNG drinkers are serious drinkers. The Miami Post in that a good many of our youth today, who have good positions, will be alcoholics some time in the future unless we can give them some useful ideas which will help prevent it," said New Jersey State Health Commissioner Dr. Joseph P. Keady.

They are starting earlier. The age level of the youngsters has been declining so that the (although) problem is reaching down to the grade school level. And a family agency in Tacoma, Washington, and the Yale Center at Alcoholism Studies points out that at some parties with as young as 12 pass out from too much drinking.

They are raising themselves, usually mentally and physically. In Wisconsin, if you meet of drinking drivers, involved in fatal accidents are in their teens. The percentage in California is 18.1, and most other states run above the same.

Not long ago a teenage girl gave a party in her home in Newport, Connecticut, while her parents were visiting elsewhere. The 14-year-old who invited. As her 14-year-old neighbors were invited to a house. The daughters finished passing. Some for trouble are occurring in West Texas, Birmingham, Alabama, Kansas, Illinois and Maine. Reports have noted are the hospital staffs who have not treated teenagers formerly poisoning in the past two years. I would note that one young, every where are kept by an overpowering love to drink themselves into a stupor.

But that, don't have to drink and drive or drink too much to destroy themselves. Clark W. Marlboro, director of the Family Service Association of America, admits as that alcohol consumption among teenagers is undoubtedly a factor in the alarming increase in mental disease and the steady rise in the incidence of various crimes.

It is a reference that 46 per cent of the 19-year-olds on Long Island are regular drinkers and that approximately the same percentage of 12 year olds drink in degrees.

In a survey by Chicago, that we have liquor related accidents by teenagers in all sections of the country, that highway accidents involving young drinkers occur in every state that alcohol poisoning hospitalizations are being rushed in nearly every hospital in the country?

Hardly. The adolescent's pattern here is to not deal at all details in the patterns set by the increasing road police and the distribution party business.

Another mind and body destroyer of the young is their inability to move the money and use common drugs. This has in fact been common with human consequences and problems in drinking 100 young lives every year in New York City alone. The number of fatalities among teenage people since in Los Angeles is 300 per year in Chicago the figure is 60 annually. Other large metropolitan areas report similar figures.

The statistics also show a tremendous increase in motor vehicle they are in. In Boston, New York, more than 800 youngsters, were arrested on various charges, in the suburbs of Los Angeles 1,000 juveniles were arrested for the same offenses. The mid west and the south report a far greater trend toward drug using among their young. Such states as Illinois, Texas, Florida, Maryland, Pennsylvania, Missouri and Kentucky are particularly interested.

Philip F. Fisher, Illinois Narcotics Control Director, speaks for most states when he says: "The job police and the medical (chemists) parties go on in the better suburbs of Chicago—Evanston, Oak Park, Moken and the rest. They go on at 10, 12, 13, 14, and even higher amounts. There are pockets of 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, At first, I wouldn't see the benefits of the movies. I just go to see my first one that I just my subject. I had a self-hatred from it. It's only I'd rather it make them. But no, I had to keep coming back. It wasn't long as if I was doing those every thing and taking the story back. I felt like I was flying as grandiose. What I'd do would be moving around me in these instances. I could do anything I wanted. There was no obstacle that I couldn't overcome.

The upside with Mary Jane is that your body soon gets so interested in the hair, it keeps you from thinking about anything else. Then you think it's time around.

I know Golda was threatening herself. I begged him. I threatened to hold out my gun. (Later, I went to learn that was the threat he knew. A justice isn't interested in you. If he goes out, it's only to try to maintain some kind of sense of self respect by showing he is still a man.)

As an Indian child, underprivileged and young, At last he captured his nation around my arm until the sun stood out. The needle sang in it, and under my skin. My hair was
red. I was my house.

SIX months later they parked Eddie's boy on pavement. They offered him the choice of Los or a post at Edgewood. Eddie told the Federal Hospital, but he couldn't make the grade. They accepted his small bribe. They should have known that he couldn't make the grade they asked of him.

When they sent him away, the bottom dropped out for me. Billie and I had shared our truth either. He was as loyal to each other as any partner can be. I'm here to realize though that no matter the putting away failure we had. There were times when there was only one partner between us. I said I think about Billie and his loved. All the times we was not our problems. I wish the parties from him, include the others.

For the past, Robin would not stop with them. He'd make the best even though I was so small I couldn't stand up. I remember three when he told me against the wall under my old sweater and I thought your heart would give out. Then he'd tell me like I was a two-year-old baby and say no, not to keep my opinions. The deprivation of having things away from the things in the world as if that's all I ever possessed in that. Anything was all I had long as it stayed in those hands.

Just to feed the memory on one hand. I raised Eddie. I earned him. I took from him. I'd have put a knife in his back if it would have helped me. You when they just try on it that way I was told.

I began drinking. I tried to get bouillabaisse, but the spirits took over first and now they know. The champagne and can tell a politician at night. We're all the same. We're underweight. Our noses constantly run. We have lost beauty. The mother law that is in, we always say: long shared things to ourselves. We don't want the problem to us. Our middle-aged, our own.

The sports weren't good. They looked as me and told me "Hustle your behind out of here" because the guys I'd known in the dorms I'd worked with would state me that they weren't doing it out of friendship. They demanded the worst type of perversion as return. I no longer cared. I was no longer a woman.

I remember a few days later in the West Pavilion, I hung around with Space and Broadway waiting for my friend. I got some of those clearing lawsuits to pump for me. They're a waste to conduct with the rest of town, so who are looking for them. I sort of with the same old-fashioned suits in the clearing lawsuit and the suits on the right. In fact, I'd be looking and waiting in the hall as my newly best friend waiting for a suit I'd been and the 30th window of the main level wall and the wall seemed to follow the way up like they were. There was nothing to look forward to, no way out.

One of the most horrible things about a jacket is that it no longer has the desire or energy to keep its body clean. My hair was unkempt and reddish after weeks without a shampoo. I looked constantly in the mirror, millions of bugs were crawling over me. Sometimes I'd sit naked and cross-legged peeing at the stinkiest of my own piss holes.

Once I was picked up on a ragmop car while I was waiting to meet a contact at Flat and Broadway. They took me to the West 24th Street station house. The cops wanted to know if I was. They treated me more out of a sense of forced detachment than anything else. They kept me in the stateroom several hours. Opened some big drawers over my head and a container of coffee. I realized they didn't despise me. They didn't really hate me. I was just a lot of the way they had swept off their feet, and like a thousand others.

When I hadn't made my score, they couldn't let me win possession. The Nurem's House of Deception was so over-crowded that they had to stretch the tables out to cover the floor.

And then you catch a warning not to come back onto the premises. And they say I know I'd be back. Twenty first and Broadway is where the action is. It's a helluva racket, too, to show.

"I SASH lower and lower. I was thirty-four and I looked like a woman of 70. My skin was pale and puffy. My eyes were watery. My heart throbbed. It got to the point that the left knee and right ankle were paining wouldn't going for the day walk. I used to tell to you, 'I'd come back and this hell with me, I got a rap in medicine,'" they said.

I even began collecting on the street. I didn't even want to talk about the kind of job I was in. It was as if I had already died and gone to hell. No fortune teller could tell what I experienced.

I read a book and also played

I thought about leaning myself out a window. But justice hadn't even the guts to do that. I kept deluding and hoping that something would happen. I told myself and everybody else I knew to not that I was going to look the birds. What? Tomorrow? It was almost tomorrow.

Then you love it. You stated we
I told you all about me. I didn't hold as he loves me first.

Lately, I've been thinking about serving myself concerned. I might as well I might just take the money we're giving and add this the first trip I want to singhore out. This why I do I heard about a girl the other day who looked it and stayed only when she goes out. I like her in it, who wants it?

I don't want to be the way any more. I don't want get a kick when school. I'm always afraid of getting a trip from a kindergarten school. Parents are always taking for me. Because of that I'm not all going to come up with parents. I don't like that. I'll be going with a classmate, one of the kids I pickup. What's not better? I don't want to wind up with a bag on my big toe and a trip to a doctor's office on Staten Island.

I am going to work in the morning. I am going to work in the morning.

Do me a favor, please: It won't do you anything, but it might save my life. Say you believe I might be your loving in the homotopia. It is to tell that way. Otherwise I'm enough. Look in my eyes and say, "You can be a woman again. You can tell secrets and look pretty and be loved." Say it, and make me believe it. You really mean it.

with a letter-sized, wickerwork couch. When she left she had prepared the ground work sufficiently, she reported to her wife, took a mild dose of barbiturates.

Lorraine left nothing to chance. With the pills already swallowed, she called the cleaners, and informed the man of what she had done.

As she had expected, within seconds the two inspectors, a sheriff and a police official rushed wildly into her room. Convinced as a priest that nightingales Lorraine lay on top of the covered bed hands folded over her tightly white breasts. Her eyes were tightly closed and her whole appearance was innocent.

The doctor bent over her, turning her eyelids open. Although he was well aware that the girl had not intended suicide, had taken no taken enough of a dosage to render her unconscious, he poked around. After all, a doctor is human too and he had his own idea of what would be a fitting payment for his strange services.

He even went along with the gas when Lorraine began to stir out of her faked unconscious and hysterically insisted upon him to push up the slip of note paper she had left on the table by the head of her bed.

Sniffing hysterically, she placed the paper in her mouth, showed quickly and somehow managed to swallow it down. The doctors watched the proceedings as questioning individuals. Even years later, when he sat with the doctor under an apron, the physician could not convince him that the note paper had indeed been black.

The "Mistake" although had its desired effect, it was soundly reported in L'Espresso de Paris which told its readers in no complete and graphic accounts of the activities of the "Vampire."

Lorraine's relatives helped provide and money at her feet in portions which they never had before. They tried to forbid each other in their frantic efforts to bring my back into her life. Lorraine's personal fortune became fantastic.

But now she began to fear what all women of her profession dread most—infidelity. She found that she had to use heavier amounts of rouge to pass her checks. She had to two her corsets that made tighter to keep the lower glass the way it should be. Little knew a first begin to appear at the corners of her eyes. There was definitely aging in.

While she was losing some of the bloom of her beauty, she was maintaining something else. There were still traces of her former back-painted. When Lorraine strided into a room, she did it in the grand manner, the knowledge of beauty and politics and literature became infectious. She could hold the attention of Paris questioned with her brilliant conversations.

SURELY, she knew that she could never hope to obtain a union for herself. She had discarded the rules of society to such a point that it would never accept her acting as a business in her own manner. This is where the most astute women of Paris finally realized her.

Lorraine began traveling the world. She showed in New York with the national tyroons and the steel magnates. She moved through South America visiting shoulder with the most affluent. She was welcomed in the Russian Czar. Local gentlemen paid for her travels just to have her spend those years.

Then on New Year's Eve, 1911, Lorraine returned to Monte Carlo. At exactly the stroke of midnight she discarded her habits, surveyed the assembled guests and raised a golden goblet of champagne to her lips.

To the death of an age, she whispered loudly.

After that Lorraine de Cistone dropped out of sight. There were many who believed she gave her fortune to charity and entered a monastery. Several of her colleagues of the night had done the same thing.

Then in 1934, advancing with the British First Army two weeks the lastest were which surrounded the Remembrance Commemorative Camp, The Women's Hall.

As they retired on aged and wrinkled women and on a chair, she managed to make it her bedroom. From the beams of her prison uniform she extracted a leather bound volume and handed it to a Tommy. Although she knew she was dying, the woman managed a respectful smile as the Tommy had never seen.

The book, written in a neat hand contained the full history of her exploits during the decade of her glory, and no other entry. She steary and headed for the back of the house. There was Ted asleep, but didn't get up. I got the way through a maze of corridors and found what I thought was a rear door. I opened it. Night air rushed in. I stopped out, just raised. This time there was a dampening sound, but not from my weapon. A stab of pain at my waist paralyzed my grip. The dog charged into the wall and the pain hit. Three droplets marked us. It was all over.

We were shoved into the large bathroom where there was Ted. He lay like a log and pulled her into him. One of the men went to the blonde's room and came out of it yelling, "Mistake! This one is dead—Mistake and Gash."

"My must be killed, Madame!"

"Silence!" She stood up and drew the rifle in front of her. "He is needed to me."

I staggered at her. "As a thief?"

MY WORDS were like a slap in the face. There was Ted, went into a rage. "Hold him!" she screamed. My legs and arms were jiggled badly. The blonde was pushed to the floor. The vice-like grip on my right arm forced me back to face out of the back wound on my wrist. But it was nothing compared to what was in store for me.

There was Ted, rushed me. Her sharp nails raked my cheeks. They dug into my neck and then ripped away my shirt. They prodded forehead of back from my chest and stomach like claws on like a wildcat. Her nails were full away and dropped to the floor. Her nails tore at the flesh on my shoulder. I struggled but it was useless. My body was on fire with pain. Blood flowed from dozens of deep scratches. The blonde girl screamed without let-up and I was about the yards of the last few minutes plus the torment, would snap her mind.

Finally, the Vietnamese looked away to admire her work. She smiled to someone and a burst of water was thrown at me. The loss of blood had drained my strength. I found it difficult to stand.

The woman who stole the gabby put my face between her two paws. "We speak better for you, Nana. I'll work on you until you come crawling to me!" She turned away. "Take those upstairs and put them in separate rooms! I want one man in the hall at all times!"

She slipped into her robe and opened on the chess lounge still facing.

The two bagpans and Trin ran through at me resulted in my pantsing out. I didn't wake up until I was in a dark room, uncomfortable on the second floor. The window was open, but the ground was at least thirty feet below me. I couldn't make it without breaking a leg. The door was locked from the outside. Like most Victorian mansions, however, all the rooms and walk were open on the lower floors with the upstairs rooms thrown together in clusters as possible.

The walls here were fine plaster boards. I looked out of them and the metal was covered with a soft knock on the other side. The inside was in the next room. I used my left hand to cut a square hole in the plasterboard near the door. She pushed the release partition toward me. I worked it loose and put it in one side. I crawled half way through.

She sat beside me. Her eyes were red and puffed from crying.

"Are you all right?"

She shrugged. "I've given up hope."

"Why?"

"Why? Are you stupid? That woman is crazy. She intends to kill us! Her voice rose and cracked and I told her to keep quiet or send down the guards."

"They'll be in any minute."

"What for?"

She ignored her face away and chuckled. "For me."

She wanted him to control her tears. I gave it to her. She told me her name was Christine Mortimer and that she was being held in complete ignorance the Trin was Trin. We talked for an hour or more, and at that time she ripped a strip of cloth from her skirt and tied it around the wound on my wrist. We could hear the guards passing outside.

Christine provided a lot more information. I pulled it up bit data. I think it would even get beyond the room. The smothering operation was more extensive than I'd imagined. Some of material marked but it is troops was being moved north. She didn't know where. I knew—COALTON headquarters, for distribution to Victoria guerrillas.

Christine also said that an important messenger from the State, too in disguise for a Christmas show, would be asked when a bomb exploded in his hotel. The act was designed to demonstrate the American.

THE young woman stopped. Christine drew her hands in sharply. A key turned in the lock. She pushed me. "Go to the place."

I hesitated. Christine ripped my face in her hands. "I've forgiven myself in it. There's nothing anyone can do."

I slipped through the hole and replaced the plasterboard. The guards came at. I looked through the crack. They were the same but who nearly started my arms off earlier. I could see their eyes glancing with lust as they moved in.

Christine stood up. She looked away from them, clanking at her throat, but she sensibly modified the word. "No."

Still she was so much resigned to hope than I was to anything. A heavy arm reached out for her face.

She pushed the one caught between them and held firmly. Their rough hands went over her body, flogging at her thighs and chest. She squeezed, her face narrowing the better and random the left. Slabby fingers rolled into her bra and jerked it away. Christine threw her head back. Tears glistered. She dashed on convulsive sobs as the gropers tore at her clothes.

My face bled with light beads of sweat and muscle. I felt my stomach clanking with rage. How often had this happened since she had been taken as hostage? I didn't know. Maybe once. Christine didn't know. How many more times could she take it before she was driven out of her mind?

She was naked now and still between the guards. I saw her legs that the air she tried hard to fight them off. Her face contorted from fear and shock. She drove her knee up into a groin, but the man kicked loose. One of her attackers growled at her resistance. He whirled her away from the other. They showed her with all of his strength. She curled across the room and clanked against a wall with a sobbing that I saw her go into. She fell in her knees. The guard who'd shoved her now played his foot on her side and pushed her over on her back.

Both of them stood over the now-conscious girl, staring at her

One pulled her arms over her head and put his knees on her wrists. He looked to the other.

For some reason everything that had happened to Christine and me was crystallized in what was happening right now. I couldn't remember and wish it. I had to be something. Christine Mortimer was a stranger and wasn't talking to me, but I'd have liked no matter who the girl was.

Neither of the guards heard me coming. I darted a savage look at the temple of the above watching Christine. He sagged in the floor. The other leaped up to meet me, but I'd already started a lunge that knocked him off balance. While he stumbled sideways, I crawled in and around his neck and spun him. We were near a window. I latched my hold on him and with one final turn, propelled him through it. Glass shattered. I saw his body disappear and I heard him scream.

"Watch out!"

CLAUDINE's warning came in time. I whirled and faced the first gropers, who came at me with a lunge. I stopped him, disarmed, thrust with the sole of my arm. I rolled his hands away with my own and bent it until he howled in pain and opened his fingers. The State fell to the floor. I almost had the full on my head when the door burst open.

Trin was Trin stood at the threshold. Her eyebrows slanted in and formed a circle around me. They were tight-lined. Their eyes filled with more hate than I'd ever seen. One snapped. "He has killed the old Madame Trin. Do I have your order to shoot him?"

The period of silence was long. Both Madame Trin waited for the order. I met Trin was Trin's steady gaze. I debated something at her eyes. I had seen it when she had been reminded that I'd killed three of her men. Focusing a desire at Administration? Challenge? Or maybe it was plain: I'd a man who didn't love and enough like their others here.

"My order hasn't changed."

The state melted at one dropped reflexively. The state seemed Trin was Trin and the hole led out in the plasterboard and entered at it. She looked at Christine then at me. "You are friends?"

"We have a common bond."

She waved the others out of the room and kept her gun at hand level. The door closed. She moved in close. Her fingers rested lightly on my shoulder. She drew them around my chest. Out of the corner of my eye I saw Christine pulling her scattered clothes together. This was Tri's first rule upon us that I could not be subliminal. "I need someone like you. A sort of second in command."

"Not a chance."

The rejection had no telling effect. "Americans do defeat, you know?" "Defeated here?"

She ignored that, too. "I need a fighter who can hit hard. You'd have more pointers than you can spend, still an honored place in the National Liberation Front."

"What else?"

Her hand became rigid on my shoulder. She hissed, "I don't have to tell you."

I looked down at her body. "Don't say better others?"

Her palm swept across my chest. I started for her, but was stopped by the gun that now pushed into my stomach. This was Tri's type disrupted quickly. "Think about it, brave man. The right answer could keep your comrades alive as well." She looked up to the door. "Talk it over with her?" She stepped into the hall. Before the door closed and looked again, I saw three shapes outside with rifles and I heard her tell them to stand guard.

I went to the window. Below, two men were hanging over the body of the single I'd pushed out. Dark shadows of men were everywhere in the hall behind the boxes, and beyond the hall by the door, sparkling under the moon's glow.

Christine stood at my side. "I heard what she said."

"The idea's ridiculous."

"Then you won't consider her offer?"

"Of course not."

She sighed. "You died."

"Don't be. The alternative isn't pretty, either."

"I don't have one. I'll be killed as soon as my captives is over—whether you follow or not." She leaned against the wall. "I never thought the war could touch me. I had my job, my little apartment on the Tri Do." She told me she was an interpreter at the American Embassy and spoke French and Vietnamese. "You know I was happy and didn't realize it." She talked probably because her nerves were shattered and because she'd had no one to communicate with in three weeks I'd trapped her. A while, but my mind wandered to some method. The more I thought about the subject, however, the more frustrated I became. Christine had stopped talking, but it was a few minutes before I was aware of it.

She'd slid to the floor and was sitting quietly. I sat down beside her, feeling a bit uncomfortable and trying awkwardly to shift to soothe her. She dropped her head on my shoulder and fell asleep. I watched the room brighten as dawn came. I heard voices outside. I heard Christine off me and looked out the window. Two young women, carrying orange shoulder bags were walking toward the river. They stopped into a long wooden pier and climbed onto a raft. An oarsman rowed them across, as deeper into the city.

Later, I told Christine what I'd seen. She nodded along that Tri was. Tri had scheduled the hotel bombing for today and that the women had probably carried the dynamite in their bags. We watched the oarsmen return to the pier without the women. Later that day we heard shots and saw black smoke rising from the center of Hanoi. I wondered if the United States could provide any important assistance.

At dusk a white uniformed woman came at with some bottled rice and water. He asked me if I had anything I wanted to tell his comrades. I said no and saw a flicker of a satisfied smile cross his face.

It was dark when Christine noticed another wave of depression. I let her cry it out on my shoulder. "Eddie... I can't take much more. I'll go out of my mind if they come for me again."

"Hang on. We're not counted out yet."

She lifted her head. I looked her. She pulled my face to hers and this time the kiss was deeper. I urged her closer to me. Her fingers went into my hair. Her body pressed against mine. "Eddie... hold me."

"I can't." She trembled. "Don't let them touch me again." Our lips came together again. I need her to the bone. We gave ourselves to the passion that enveloped us, our bodies shuddering and proving that what we did didn't have to be the worst thing that Tri was. Tri's man had made it. Christine was asked, because we were because she wanted to be because she could rely well to the one and only time in her life that she'd know what it was to share the involvement of moments between a man and woman.

MINUTES later, I stood to the door and tapped on it. "Tell your brother I want to see him right now?"

Christine turned to me. "What are you going to do?"

I pulled my arm away from her grasp. "What the hell do you think I'm going to do?"

"Shut up. I don't have any right to play God over your life."

Tri was Tri. I noticed she closed the door behind her. "You're talked it over?"

"Yes. I've got some ideas."

Christine gasped. "Eddie no—" I saw Tri was. "You've done. What are they?"

"That your father keep their shaking hands off me and that you provide safe comfort when you're finished with her?"

"I'll consider it."

"Be good. I want better than that."

Her eyes narrowed. "How do I know you're sincere?"

I walked over to her and stopped my hand under her ribs. "Show me where you sleep and I'll prove it."

There was a sharp intake of breath. The body started to press but at my touch.

Behind me, Christine sighed. "Eddie? Eddie?"

"You're a fool." I propped over my shoulder. "The bargaining for your life."

Tri was Tri. I had her gun leveled at my chest. "If this is a trick—"

"No tricks."

I couldn't remove her. She brought two of the guards with us and left one with Christine. The man stood outside her bedroom. The gun stayed in her hand when she let the side fall to the floor. She turned to me and stood for a moment in the soft light. "Come here."

I moved over to her and put my arms around her waist. I felt the cold muscle of the gun at my chest. "You need a lot of courage."

"You will be tested repeatedly."

"I won't like it."

"No more talk." She caught my lips. Her body protested against mine. "Don't make me wait."

I kissed her hard but with my eyes open and taking in everything in the room. She cupped me toward the bed. I held back as an effort to delay the moment. She pulled away from my lips. There was a decided edge to her voice when she said, "Don't leave me."

"I'm not, but why push it?"

She thrust up. The garment slipped my chest. She pulled it to my side. I stared at her. "This part of my underwear?"

"Well, it what you like. You need to having my clothes stopped."

they're going to depart. They were usually out in less than four months, if not less. One of the last days they'd intend of their transatlantic adventures last night the talk. Bank of the money institutions. There were two banks, the Commerce Bank and the Bank of the Republic. The Bank of the Republic was really, supposedly, the Bank of America, which had a total of 700 shareholders.

The next day, Tuesday, Feb. 1, the British High Commissioner of the Transvaal, Sir Alfred Milner, and his wife, accompanied by a number of officials, arrived in the morning at the station. The following day the Transvaal arrived at 10 o'clock in the morning. The next day, Wednesday, Feb. 2, the ship arrived at 10 o'clock in the morning. The ship arrived at 10 o'clock in the morning. The ship arrived at 10 o'clock in the morning.

Charitable and business trusts are also subject to the same rules.

And it was these top dogs of Reaganism (or, I argue, that would be appropriate in these much better times) that would never target the 7,000 who died there, nor the 30,000 who were wounded or maimed in battle.

There would have been one more thing that we have to do, and that was to get the money from the bank. It was a little bit of a problem, but we managed to get it.

for girls they want. Cool, pretty, perky. Knowing what they really think of you makes a girl feel more real to them. These comedians are definitely do a lot of sleeping around. Unfortunately there are millions of girls who are starved for male companionship that they'd do anything for the quick handshake and the old how telephone no-

—And what's life like with one of these two big parents? YOU were raised in Japan. Maybe he'll call tonight. But of course you'll know it's only because he has nothing better to do.

good you to come through for him. May not. He's got his own problems. Indeed by offering his name and company to you.

HOW does that work out in marriage? I'll tell you about it, and I know what she threatened with me: divorce. She apparently got told her to return from all domestic activities—cooking, cleaning, etc.—he added the words of possible. Well, on my god, because that's wasn't possible! Her husband became rather nasty, whining and demanding. He wore her down until she gave up, but despite her medical advice. You know the rest of the story. The hemorrhaging, the trip to the hospital in the third of night, the shock of losing the pregnancy.

When I recounted this shocking display of selfishness to my own physician, he just shook his head sadly. He told me that the husband's attitude had not been at all unusual. Then, and again at his own practice he had come across such behavior. Sometimes it makes the wonder whether there are any decent people left, he said.

It's been my experience that men like Dick have been spoiled from childhood. They have learned all of lack of it. A case in point is one which happened to a woman I know. Her husband married her without telling her that his was important. He had desired a home and a woman's companionship so much that he had held both his offerings from her.

I want a gay who will be a man in every sense of the word. I want him to be virile usually. But I don't want him to be a sex machine who is devoid of emotion. I want him to take pride in protecting me. After all, isn't that a man's function?

He doesn't have to let it bother him. But he should be a guy who knows where he's going and wants to bring me along with him. I don't want to spend my life with a guy who's afraid to make a commitment and who's afraid to make a commitment not to me.

For from today, happiness and a home, the beautiful husband can be well on his way to yours because of the tie she had to be confined to a mental home and never fully come out of the shock.

But I say there is more to love relationships than sex. It is in the non-sexual elements of a marriage that a reminder of devastating sex life is built. A woman cannot be cheered because of sexual benefits, financial stress, housekeeping problems and a host of other things which go into the love state relationship with a man, and none ever unconnected. Only when the truly loving person can be made out for her man with the sexual situation which they both desire.

WEAR are the techniques of love class? Here are some:

1. Men's understanding. The woman who knows her husband inside her more than any other woman in the world despite her shortcomings is the one who will remain true with the Man that only a woman can give.

2. Building a community of support. The man and woman who work together towards a common goal will translate their feelings into a richness of mutual experience unknown to the single people of the world.

3. Tenderness. A woman is completely vulnerable to the man with whom she shares the intimacies of marriage. He should never forget his duty to hurt her. He should always protect her from it.

4. Marital privacy. No other relationship should encroach upon during their shared moments of intimacy. The problems, frustrations and anxieties must be put out of his mind. He must give himself to his wife in the same manner he expects her to give herself to him.

5. Joy in his response. While a freely chosen, he must get over the masculine desire to dominate which he refuses all women to enter passive response or unresponsible state. The well-adjusted, mature, well-adjusted sexual response is as much as her husband. It is wrong to think that the glibly married woman is one who has no secrets. In reality the more sexually ordered she is, the more faithful she is likely to remain.

4. The complexity of understanding love. There are times when she will not respond. A few hours later for a few days at work and she will become her old self again. Of course about the limited amount of a lack of response probably originates from a variety of reasons.

5. A desire to father her children. In her young, in accepting the responsibility of fatherhood personally. Women's ability to be able to a man's desire to be with the mother would be placed in her. If so, the other hand be become positive of their offspring's need for her attention. In this is a house of horrors for a woman.

6. An understanding of those things which cause her anxiety and those which cause her creativity. The process between husband and wife can be thought of as and as long as it brings happiness to both. However, to be able to cause one's wife to submit to pleasure she husband's attempts to destroy the structure of a marriage.

7. A willingness to accept the fact. This is equally true in sexual and non-sexual matters. In non-sexual matters will ever be a one-way street. You cannot expect there to return then, you are willing to give.

8. The ability to laugh at yourself. Laughter may well be one of the greatest of love techniques. It can turn into potentially negative situations. It even stress. It provides the lubricant of human relations.

A woman will tell you an all techniques of living. The female sexual man is not necessarily the world's richest or most powerful. As a matter of fact, a woman's role in a sexual marriage may be the love of one of the richest men in the United States indicated that in important phases of total living there were far better yet.

You must be happy, honest. You must have courage. You must have self-discipline. You must have sensitivity and humor. You must be able to deal with your wife in the true sense of the word before you can think of her as a woman.

Your behavior in all phases of your daily living will be the basis on which you are judged. Be not lost and be inspired by the passionately secure woman.

However the man who walked a fatal corridor in the prism of life may have his parameters shifted, distorted or overwork. His compulsion disease may not be joined with one condition for the usual observer.

A report on cardio-respirator distress has come flooding through on this subject. Many have died on cardio-respirators in the performance of duties," he says. "But in all the experience of my practice I have never seen a man who appeared while being returned with his own wife. All of the victims have been involved in short affairs. I believe it was the pulling the nervous system induced by the creature, rather than the physical exertion which caused the death."

Other phenomena say that intense bonding by the demand of heterosexual relationships between men and with men gives legitimacy to love. The thing, they say, is sexual masculinity at work in the full course or on the dance floor men try to prove a woman he does not feel. This can be seen observed by his failure to enter into a happy and rewarding sexual union. To compensate he becomes over-competitive. He must assert his masculinity at all costs - even at the expense of his own life.

Women with low pay can be a buffer on the craft-union participation in the standardization effort. Thus, one part of the study is the potential of the barrier role of the unskilled Standardization movement shows that historical movements at a substantially lower wage than do married men.
